 - Eva Rios-Alvarado spoke for the Library faculty and shared that the library is prepared to go 100% online for instruction and reference. Faculty can expect shared information on services soon. The library is here to support the campus.
 - Diana Felix shared that Counselors are meeting with students during the campus closure. They are asking faculty to let students know next week, especially those who are "dropping" or struggling in the class, that counseling can help with interventions. Students can now schedule 45-minute appointments over the phone (Front Counter is managing this through google voice: (626) 387-3930; online via SARS; Video appointments through Cranium Cafe; and send counseling questions through the email-based system.
 - Melina Bowen shared that the Pride Center is ready to serve students.
 - Sara Mestas shared that Guided pathways faculty coordinators will be meeting Friday 3.27.20 and will soon have more information about how they can help the rest of the semester.
 - Christine Cummings spoke on behalf of the Arts and Dance departments saying that the online version of their classes will not prepare students for what they need to be competitive in those industries. Repeatability of courses is needed for these students.

- Shiloh Blackshear shared that the Psychology department created a student resource document with links for students that need access to basic needs and health. It has been shared through a campus announce email or you can email her directly for a copy.
