

The Student Equity Speaker Series, Department of Art History, and POD Present:

On Pedagogy, Research, and Inclusivity: A Faculty Discussion with Artist Ria Brodell Thursday, April 9th: 11:30 am – 12:30pm in the POD Loft

Over the past decade, artist and scholar Ria Brodell has been creating their series of portrait paintings called "Butch Heroes," now featured in a book by MIT Press. The paintings take their form and inspiration from Catholic Holy cards, but instead of featuring the saints, Brodell highlights forgotten or lesser known "butch heroes" from across history, geographies, cultures, and time. The portraits include a summary of the individual's narrative, and Brodell's archival research, including primary sources.

Brodell will lead a faculty discussion about pronouns, language, and classroom inclusivity, based on their own research, paintings, and pedagogical practices.

Faculty attendants will receive a free copy of Butch Heroes.

Sponsored by the Student Equity
Speaker Series. To request disability-related accommodations, please contact the Equity Center (909)274-4378 or equitycenter@mtsac.edu.

