1. When Van Gogh was twenty-five years old, he became a minister and worked in a poor coal-mining district in southwestern Belgium. One day, while he ^{was} listening to a poor woman, he had an idea. He ^{decided} ~~was deciding~~ to stop eating. He wanted to give his food money to the poor miners. On another day, he noticed that a poor child ^{was} wearing no shoes, so Van Gogh gave away his own clothing and other possessions. Eventually, he was fired. His superiors worried about Van Gogh's "excessive enthusiasm."

2. Penniless and in despair, he isolated himself and began to draw. His brother Theo ^{agreed} ~~was agreeing~~ to support Vincent financially. Soon, Van Gogh developed a passion for painting.

3. Van Gogh settled in southern France where he wanted to start an artists' colony. He invited a fellow artist, Paul Gauguin, to come live with him. While the two men ^{were} living together, they engaged in some violent arguments. After one terrible fight, Van Gogh ^{cut} ~~was cutting~~ off the lower portion of his own ear with a razor.

4. Van Gogh voluntarily entered an asylum in Saint Remy. While he was ^{staying} ~~stay~~ in the asylum, he created beautiful, vivid pictures of wildflowers, fields, and houses. He spent twelve months in the asylum. In December 1889, in a letter to his friend Emile Bernard, Van Gogh said that his health ^{was} improving a great deal. Unfortunately, six months later, Van Gogh committed suicide, and the world lost a great artist.

FINAL REVIEW

1. One of America's most original photographers is Cindy Sherman. In 1980, Sherman watching was ~~watch~~ an old movie when she had an idea. She decided to take photographs of dressed herself. In each photo, Sherman ~~was dressing~~ like a 1950s movie star. In 1981, her first one-woman exhibit, Untitled Film Stills, was a huge success. Later that year, while she was preparing for her second show, she received a call from a museum curator in the Netherlands. So, in 1982, she had her first European show at the Stedelijk Museum in Amsterdam. Sherman's original photos now appear in many museums. Presently, is Sherman producing a new series of photos.
2. It is difficult for modern artists to find an original style. Alison Stone, a California-am based art student, says, "While I working on a piece, I am always aware of influences. I trying am-try to find my own style, but it is difficult.” Stone adds, “have We been studying art for attempting two years. Each one of us is ~~attempt~~ to do original work.”

3. Stone is also interested in photography. These days, many contemporary photographers moving are ~~move~~ out of darkrooms and renting offices. Basically, digital technology is ~~change~~ changing has the way that photographers work. Recently, Stone ~~been~~ has spending more time in her office than in her studio. When asked what she is doing these am am days, Stone said, “Right now, I ~~manipulating~~ am digital images. I ~~trying~~ am to create surreal love images. This new technology is exciting, and I ~~am loving~~ love it.” Stone has lofty career goals:
want
“I ~~am wanting~~ want to be as famous as Cindy Sherman.”
