Concept Check: ~時（とき）

In Japanese, the word 時 is used to refer to a specific time when an event occurs in relation to another event. In a sentence it is often put after a time reference. For example, in the phrase “高校生の時”, 高校生 is the time reference referring to when (you) were a high school student. Adding 時 with the reference particle の to a noun indicates that you are talking about the time you were the noun.

When using 時 to describe a sequence of events use the format: A時B.

When B is done before, or in preparation of A, the present tense of A is used.

Example: ジョンさんはのりおくれる時, おちこみます。 (When John is depressed, he misses his ride.)

When B is done after, or is a result of A, the past tense of A is used.

Example: ジョンさんはのりおくれた時, おちこみます。 (When John missed his ride, he got depressed.)

We can also use 時 with verbs to refer to a time you do something, did something, or to a sequence of events.

When referring to a time you do something, use present tense.

Example: のりおくれる時 : when you miss (your) ride

When describing something you did in the past, use the past tense of the verb.

Example: おちこんだ時: when you were depressed
