Enrollees by community college

The number of CCC transfer students attending UC increased by about 25 percent over the last decade, fueled both by strong application demand and UC's efforts to increase transfer enrollment. Over the past two years, transfer enrollment has declined slightly. The decline is attributable to slowed overall enrollment growth — which is a function of lack of funding for enrollment growth — as well as a decline in CCC applicants. For fall 2015, transfer applications increased slightly and UC expects that strong state investment in the community colleges over the past two years will result in high numbers of applications to UC in the future.
