If your college is looking to capitalize on its local talent and foster leadership development to take student achievement to a higher level, we encourage you to gather a cross-functional team of experienced and emerging leaders to explore new concepts about leading large-scale change at your college. Come join us for rich discussions, shared ideas, and provocative questions that will enhance our collective capacity to further address student achievement and equity gaps.

Guided team conversations will support application of system leadership concepts and tools to current and planned change efforts. Summit participants will be introduced to several tools that support a systems approach to leadership and change.

Highlights

- Chancellor Eloy Oakley will discuss the Strategic Vision for Success and what this means for leaders in the Chancellor's Office and the field.
- John Kania, MBA, Global Managing Director, FSG, will introduce the concepts and practices of system leadership and lead participants in reflection and interaction that will support development of a systems perspective.

This will be the first in a series of convenings sponsored by IEPI to support CCC dialogue and change leadership development. Lunch is included the first day, and breakfast and lunch are included on day 2.
