Finally, a real educational conversation about Black issues and the systemic underpinning and plight of a myriad of issues impacting African Americans. In this five-part webinar series, leading scholars and prominent voices from the Black community will engage in discourse and debate challenges and solutions. Topics covered will include but not limited to Education, Economics, Politics and other necessary policy changes that are needed to overcome the systemic racism that has resulted in Economic Apartheid of Black people in the United States. Webinars will discuss and delve deeper into topics such as economic and educational empowerment, reparations, political thoughts and groups analysis of race relations.

The fact that everyone is symbolically echoing “Black Lives Matter” as a national movement has propelled many institutions and corporations to center the issues of Black America. These panelists have written extensively on this topic and are subject matter experts on the discourse of Black America however their views are thought provoking, controversial to some but essential to many from the communities they represent. This intent of this discourse is to seed some foundational knowledge and questions for those looking to research and broaden the conversations of ensuring Black Minds Matter as well as Black Lives Matter.
